Lavi Industries: Designing Effective Emergency Egress for Public Queues

Exhibit Hall On the Fly Stage

A well-designed queuing system is integral for accessibility and the safety of travelers as they move through the terminal environment. This presentation covers the important design elements and product functionalities that need to be considered when implementing public queuing and pedestrian flow systems to facilitate a safe and orderly experience during emergencies. We'll cover best practices for queue layout and design, as well as product solutions such as Swing Gates, Breakaway Stanchion Belts, and Magnetic-Base Stanchions that help create queuing systems that enable effective emergency egress in any size queue.

Building Tomorrow's Airport Industry Leaders...Today

Ballroom A

With the rapid pace of change, having effective leaders at all levels of the organization is critical for the airport industry's future success. Hear from leading CEOs/Senior Executives about how they are building up their leaders and finding balance in times of uncertainty. This session will explore the critical leadership qualities necessary to address tomorrow's challenges, approaches to developing leaders in today's environment, and opportunities for industry collaboration.

Thinking Strategically About Airport Infrastructure

Ballroom B

An array of external pressures is changing airport infrastructure investment priorities in fundamental ways. Post-pandemic recovery trajectories; net zero carbon commitments; Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) considerations; and changing passenger expectations are just a few of these pressures that are requiring airport operators to strategically rethink their infrastructure needs and how best to meet them. In this session, gain the insights of airports, leading consultants, and investors as they explain how airports can prepare for a transition to new alternatives and what questions airports should be asking themselves and their stakeholders.

Changes to the Air Service Landscape

102

Air service connectivity is the heart of the commercial aviation industry. For nearly three years, airports and airlines have faced unprecedented challenges in building back the business and meeting customer expectations. The air service landscape continues to evolve and while progress is made every day on the path toward recovery, many challenges remain. Hear from airline industry leaders who will share their perspectives on many issues including the current state of the airline industry, the future of small community air service, and opportunities for airports and airlines to collaborate for success.

ADB SAFEGATE: Intelligent Apron Management

Exhibit Hall On the Fly Stage

The airport apron is where three flows meet: aircraft, passengers, and baggage. Efficient management of apron operations leads to shorter turnaround times, fewer safety incidents and improved revenue, among other benefits. An intelligent apron is a connected ecosystem of processes and solutions that will help airports and airlines in post-covid recovery, as well as facilitate a future-proof digital transformation focusing on an augmented intelligence, human-centered operational model to support real-time decision making and performance.

On The Fly Stage

WSP: Citizens Broadband Radio Service

Exhibit Hall On the Fly Stage

Private cellular networks are gaining in popularity for site wide wireless communications at airports. At an installed cost not much higher than traditional wireless, airports can get more secure communications, higher bandwidth, and no monthly fees for mobile devices compared to carrier mobile services. This presentation will discuss the technology as well as ongoing demo and design approach for a major project at HNL for security systems applications, with capacity for future mobile innovative technology applications.

Exhibit Hall On the Fly Stage

Play with the opportunities and challenges of planning a ZNE campus! San Francisco International Airport is pursuing LEED for Cities & Communities and published its plan to be Zero Net Energy in 2021. SFO's new buildings include the first LEED Gold airport terminal in North America, a zero net energy Airport Operations Facility (AOF), and the first potentially LEED v4 Platinum terminal in the US. Just as importantly, SFO has changed the culture of its staff, consultants, and relationships with tenants, concessionaires and passengers. Attendees will play with these and other ZNE strategies to explore ZNE building and campus planning, operations and transformation.

Nokia: Industry 4.0 Connectivity to Enhance Airport Services

Exhibit Hall On the Fly Stage

Industry 4.0 in airport domain signifies the full process digitalization, Operational excellence, enhanced passenger experience and further emphasis on the monetization, facilitating cost improvements as well as reducing the carbon footprint. However, digitization needs an end-to-end strategy that should include all stake holders of the eco system, like passenger processing, ground operations, aircraft handling, MRO and Cargo, but also tower and runway operations, protected by access control and cybersecurity. In this presentation, we will discuss how we can achieve all the above with a sustainable design and solution approach to make airport provided enhance services to its various talents.
